Facts, Fallacies, and Factors in Child Support. Child support is often the most difficult part of the discussion when designing a parenting plan, and the issue that most often brings single parents into the legal system. This program covers the proper determination of the parents' child support obligation, use of the Child Support Worksheet and common misconceptions about the child support process. We will also discuss special considerations concerning child support in Temporary Custody situations. The panel will consist of Amy Callis and Darrell Sproles, both practicing family law attorneys and experienced guardians ad litem; along with James Karney, a Rule 31 Family Mediator who frequently works with families in developing	Family Law	1:00pm	2:00pm	1.0 Hour Family Law parenting plans and non-custodial agreements.

Parental Relocation, Helping Parents Moving Apart Navigate the Change Moving presents challenges, both legal and logistical, when distance makes an existing parenting plan unworkable. Topics in this session include the legal requirements and considerations contained in the Tennessee Parental Relocation Statute, issues in key opinions from the Tennessee Court of Appeals, and considerations in designing parenting plans tailored for moves of both moderate and long distances. The presenters include attorneys Amy Callis, and J. Christian Stadler, and Rule 31 Family Mediator James Karney.	Family Law	2:15pm	3:15pm	1.0 Hour Family Law
Is This Even Legal? The advent of “document kits” and on-line document services, pro se litigants and sometime less than diligent representation during the divorce process can lead to less than ideal results and real challenges for family court professionals asked to repair the damage. Our panel will examine real-world examples of cases and remedies when proper parenting plans and child support determinations are not included in the original documents. The session will also include a review of several opinions related to the discussion.
